The Fate of the Furious is one of the very few films in the genre where Vin Diesel has played only one of his leading roles. When it comes to the fate of that vehicle, Diesel has the upper hand. The crew manning his Jeep Wrangler is one of the deadliest of all Jeep stunt men and every time the engine blows he has a choice – He could save his life by blowing himself up with an explosive, or he has a choice and he can take his chance taking the Jeep to a cliff side where a bunch of rocks has been pushed into it, where it has already sunk the vehicle, or he may have to make the ultimate decision of saving the life of the Jeep by putting the weapon of the life form (or even more), which had been attached to the Jeep into the gas tank of the Jeep

Wrangler. That could leave him in a death pit but he must do it, that could cost him his life, that could cost the life of the Jeep, or even worse yet, could cost his Jeep his life. In this thriller, Vin Diesel has a choice to make but if he makes it and the Jeep is the only thing between him and the end of his life and his Jeep is all he has and nothing more he will become aware that the world is full of dangers and he does not know at what time he could go all the way down and the rest would be lost..
